

S3 Topic Week 13

The Beach in the Future

This week your child and you can think about what might have changed when going on a trip to the beach sometime in the future. They can make a model of their futuristic beach in a box with the top and a side removed.

Some children could think about what they might see at the beach tomorrow. The activity could be short to not exceed their attention span.

Others could spend more time thinking about what might have changed in the future at the beach. They might need you to use your imagination to and to guide them to ideas (please don't give them an answer straight away, give clues first eg: how do you think people would travel to the beach in the future?) You could help them to look up ideas on the internet too. They could also think about what things might remain the same.

Some might still need help but may be able to do more for themselves both in the planning and also in the making and using the prompts you have given.

Please try to get photos of your creation and be brave and try to upload the pictures onto Evidence for Learning (it is easier than you might think and you can't get it wrong). I would love to see the pictures.

Most important have fun with your child doing this this. Thank you.